CHOICE READING.

"If you enlighten the people, do not forget that this is but half the work. Let them be made view-tious and religious, or you leave them more exposed to danger than they were before."

From the Fountain.

A SKETCH.

It was the hour of twilight. In a luxuriously furnished apartment was seated a fond mother,—before her kneeled a darling, and only son, his tiny hands clasped in prayer. As he lisped the words "Lead me not into temptation," the mother gave a full and heartfelt response, and offered a silent prayer that this her only child might be delivered from evil, and early brought into the folds of Christ.

Time passed on. The child was now a youth, and more than his childhood promised had been fulfilled. He was the pride and joy of doating parents,—his society sought by a large circle of acquaintances, and he bid fair to be one of earth's proudest noblest sons.

Fifteen years passed,—when we see the youth a man. But what a change has taken place! Instead of the youth happy, beloved, and respected by all, we see a miserable and degraded being,—a disgrace to his friends. The blood shot eye and haggard countenance, the tottering step, and neglected dress, tell but too truly that he is a yielding subject to the tyrant Alcohol.
His society is not now, as formerly, courted by the wealthy and the learned,—but he is a companion for drunken revels and scenes of dissipation. His conscience is nearly deadened,—but when it does call his attention to his present state, and memory reverts to the time when he was a man, respected and influential, he sighs to think what a sad change had come over him.— But yielding to temptation, he drinks still deeper of the poisonous cup, and tries to drown his feelings in dissipation.

It was a night of a Temperance lecture.
Already had the audience been seated some time, awaiting with impatience the lecturer, when he entered, attended by the President and several others. He took the desk with a firm and dignified air, amid the cheers of the assembly. As he commenced speaking, every soul was hushed save that of the speaker's voice. Not a word nor a whisper was heard in that large hall.

In his discourse he eloquently appealed to all present who were in the habit of drinking alcoholic drinks at all, strongly warned them of their danger in so doing and to prove the truth of his assertion gave a graphic description of his childhood, youth, fall and redemption. He took his seat amid cheers of applause, while many present came forward and signed the pledge.

But who is the speaker to whom we have been listening? It is the child, the youth, the inebriate, but now the man.

KETHENA.

SOUTH HADLEY, July 25th, 1846.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

"I saw a temple reared by the hands of men, standing with high pinnacles in the distant plain. The storms beat upon it—the God of nature hurled his thunderbolts against it—and yet it stood firm as adamant.
Reverly was in its hall—the happy, the young and the beautiful were there. I returned, and the temple was no more! its high walls lay in scattered ruins; moss and wild grass grew wildly there, and the midnight hour, the owl's cry, added to the deep solitude—the young, and the gay who had revelled there had passed away.

I saw a child rejoicing in his youth, the idol of his mother, and the pride of his father. I returned, and the child had become old. Trembling with the weight of years, he stood the last of his generation—a stranger amidst the desolation around him.

I saw the old oak stand in all its pride on the mountain, the birds were carolling on its boughs; I returned, the oak was leafless, the winds were playing at its pastime through its branches.

"Who is the destroyer?" said I to my guardian angel.

"It is TIME," said he, "when the morning stars sang together with joy, over the new world, he commenced his course; and when he shall have destroyed all that is beautiful of the earth, plucked the sun from its sphere, veiled the moon in blood, yea, when he shall have rolled the heavens away as a scroll, then shall an angel from the throne of God come forth, and with one foot upon the sea, and one hand on the land, lift up his hand toward heaven, and swear by Heaven's eternal—"Time is, time was, but time shall be no longer."

[Paulding.]

THE OFFENDED.

Every one is ready to admit the duty of not giving offence to others. It is one of the universally acknowledged laws of the society in which we are units, to live peaceably with all around us, and to avoid any thing which may cause estrangement, and produce angry and bitter feeling; and he who watonly violates this law, and needlessly irritates and provokes, proves himself unworthy of the blessings which civilization and society were intended to secure.

If every one acted in an offensive manner, the component parts must be broken up, and man must again retrograde into soliari-ness and barbarism; for it is only by mutual respect and good will that society can cohere and exist.

"It is the glory of a man," says the sacred proverb, "to pass over a transgression;" and it is the truest wisdom and best philosophy sometimes to shut our eyes to insult, even when there may be some reason to fear it was not entirely premeditated.
At all events, we shall meet in the world with quite enough offences, unless we are more than ordinarily fortunate, without seeking out imaginary insults, and wasting our strength and destroying our peace by fighting with the wind. Our severest scrutiny is best turned to ourselves, that we may not be offenders, and our most favorable judgment formed respecting the conduct and actions of others, that we may not be offended. While we may be sure that, in the crowded path of life, we ourselves do not intend to run wilfully against others, though we may sometimes stumble against them, so we must hope and believe that they in turn have no intention of offending us, though they may sometimes accidentally jostle us in their turn. The duty of endurance has undoubtedly its proper limits, but it is a wise determination not only not to offend, but not to be easily offended. Every one desires that others should interpret his actions kindly, and where any may be of doubtful import, to hope the best; and such is the way in which their actions should be regarded by us. Were the duty of not taking offence more thought of and better understood, the peace of individuals, of families, of communities, of nations, would rest on a firmer foundation, and something would be added to the general amount of human harmony and happiness.

PATENT AGENCY

At Washington City, D. C.
ZENAS C. ROBBINS, Mechanical Engineer and Agent for procuring Patents, will prepare the necessary drawings and papers for applicants for patents, and transact all other business in the line of his profession at the Patent Office. He can

DENTAL SURGERY.

DODGE & PARMELE,
DENTAL SURGEONS, of Bond-street, New York, having practiced the three past winters in this city, respectfully announce to their friends and the public that they have concluded to keep their Washington office open during the entire year in future at their present location on Pennsylvania Ave., between 9th & 10th sts. where one or both of the partners may always be found in attendance. They respectfully tender their professional services to their friends and the public, and invite all who may require the advice and skill of the experienced and practical Dentist to call on them, learn their terms, and examine their claims to public confidence and patronage. They would particularly call attention to their patent method of fastening artificial teeth when set on gold plate, which is used by them alone in the city of Washington. The most prominent advantages are the following: 1st. It saves the pain attendant upon the removal of the roots of the front teeth when in a healthy condition, and makes those roots highly useful in fastening the artificial teeth.
2d. It gives the teeth greater firmness, rendering them always much less troublesome and more useful in the process of mastication than the common mode.
3d. It renders it easy to remove and replace the teeth, which, together with the peculiar simplicity of the fastenings, enable the wearer to keep them always clean.
The great improvement secured by this patent needs but to be seen in order to be understood, and used to be appreciated. It is universally commended by those who have availed themselves of its advantages.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.

November 22, 1845.

I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the foregoing, having received for myself and other members of my family, the benefit of the professional services of Dr. Parmele to my entire satisfaction.
ANDREW COYLE.
